

Proposal notes

Proposed terms for beginning a partnership: no base salary, commission tied to collected revenue, and a requested benefits package. These terms are for discussion.

1. No base salary. Revenue comes first.

I am proposing a commission-led start with no base salary. Handrail receives the customer payment first; my commission follows that collection. There is no upfront commission on money the customer has not paid.

A benefits package is part of my request and a separate company cost. Delivery, operating costs and benefits still need to fit the economics of each sale.

2. Hire first: 15% build + 5% recurring

If Handrail brings me on before I originate the qualifying client, the proposed rate is 15% of collected build fees and 5% of collected recurring fees on my credited sales.

This is the lower build rate in exchange for Handrail making the commitment first. There is still no base salary in this proposal.

3. Client first: 20% build + 5% recurring

If I bring the qualifying client first, Handrail brings me on at 20% of collected build fees and 5% of collected recurring fees. That rate applies to the triggering client and all future credited sales under our relationship.

The additional 5 percentage points are proposed for bringing in the qualifying client before the hire. The higher rate still follows collections.

4. Illustrative collections and commission

Illustration: $120,000 build, 12 equal monthly installments.

Collected per installment $10,000

	Hire first · 15%	Client first · 20%
Build commission	$1,500	$2,000
Handrail remaining before costs	$8,500	$8,000

$500 more commission per collected installment under client first.

Customer payment arrives before the related commission is paid.

Before delivery, benefits and other costs. Illustration only; not a forecast or Handrail pricing.

If all 12 illustrated installments are collected, total build commission is $18,000 under hire first or $24,000 under client first—a $6,000 difference.

At either path's 5% recurring rate, a $2,000 recurring collection produces $100 of commission.

5. A 90-day opportunity

Agree on the structure now, with a 90-day window to bring in the qualifying client. Handrail can bring me on earlier at the hire-first rate. If I bring the qualifying client first within the window, the client-first rate applies.

If neither happens, Handrail can walk away without an obligation to hire. We should settle the qualifying-client criteria and treatment of deals in progress before starting.

6. A starting point with room to grow

I would start with new business, working with your team on discovery, scoping and pricing. My contribution can evolve with Handrail's needs as we agree on priorities and support.

My request includes a benefits package when I join. We should confirm coverage where I live, the start date and my contribution, along with the tools and support I need and a practical policy for approved travel and selling expenses.

7. For our next conversation

These points remain open for us to agree:

- Qualifying-client criteria.
- Credited accounts and how sales credit is confirmed.
- Recurring commission duration.
- Payment reporting and timing.
- Benefits coverage, start date and my contribution.
- Treatment of deals still in progress when the window ends.

A proposal for discussion. Handrail will prepare the final agreement after we align on the business terms.
